DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

This application currently names joint inventors. In considering patentability of the claims under 35 U.S.C. 103(a), the examiner presumes that the subject matter of the various claims was commonly owned at the time any inventions covered therein were made absent any evidence to the contrary. Applicant is advised of the obligation under 37 CFR 1.56 to point out the inventor and invention dates of each claim that was not commonly owned at the time a later invention was made in order for the examiner to consider the applicability of 35 U.S.C. 103(c) and potential 35 U.S.C. 102(e), (f) or (g) prior art under 35 U.S.C. 103(a).

Claims 6 to 13 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Skoglund et al (wo 02-071336) in view of Battersby et al, (j. of microscopy).

The Skoglund et al reference teaches a method of 3-d reconstruction of crystals, note entire reference. The crystals are placed in a TEM and a resulting data set of tilt series is created. The data set is then used by a reconstruction program. The program uses an iterative method based on a prior probability distribution compared with the images collected by the TEM. Also, a COMET procedure can be used as part of the 3-d reconstruction, note examples. The sole difference between the instant claims and the prior art is the use of a cryoTEM. However, the Battersby et al reference teaches vitrifying a sample of crystals and then getting images using a cryoTEM, note abs. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to modify the Skoglund et al reference by the teachings of the Battersby et al reference to use cryoTEM in order to increase the quality of the images of the crystals obtained.

The claims further differ from the instant claims in the type of crystal. However, in the absence of unexpected results, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to use microcrystals and crush them first in the combined references in order to produce uniform crystals for imaging and using smaller ones in order to obtain more data to increase the numbers increasing the 3-d reconstruction model quality.
